

FINAL EXAMS CANCELLED

Final exams have been cancelled.

A series of gas leaks and bomb threats have forced the shutdown of all major buildings on campus, and necessitated the evacuation of the surrounding area.

A grim University President Dr. Harry Gunning announced on Monday evening that these radical steps were necessary after Edmonton firemen had found and defused three bombs in the Old Arts Building east of the Cameron Library.

The trouble began with a series of bomb threats on Monday morning. On Monday afternoon students in Tory, Humanities and CAB complained of drowsiness and a persistent noxious smell. Further investigation revealed gas leakages in all three buildings, which were evacuated immediately.

Panic set in as students rushed from the buildings, and off the campus. Reportedly a number of students were hospitalized after being trampled on as they attempted to escape from CAB.

John Nicol, secretary to the Board of Governors, received the first bomb threat at approximately 9:15 a.m. A male voice, who refused to identify himself, described final exams as "patently absurd" and "prima facie ridiculous", according to Nicol.

"He threatened to blow up the Tory and Humanities buildings if we did not cancel all exams" said Nicol.

"Naturally I notified city police, University President Gunning and Student Union President Dean Olmstead as quickly as possible" he added.

By the time Nicol contacted Olmstead the SU President had already received a call announcing that bombs had been planted in the Biological Sciences Building and in Old Arts.

City Police were reluctant to comment but Captain Archibald Macduff confirmed that foul play was suspected.

"It appears that some of the boys and girls were not prepared for their exams" said Macduff.

He refused to comment on the University's decision to cancel finals, only adding that "it would be lunacy to admit the public on campus for at least another week or so."

It appears that all exams completed so far will stand, but grades for everyone else will be determined without benefit of finals.

A number of students plan to protest this decision and Federation of Alberta Students Executive Officer Brian Mason announced that his organization will support their efforts.

"This arbitrary decision by the university administration is merely the last in a long line of examples of university officials trampling on students' rights"

"Naturally students should have the right to decide if they want to write finals or not" he added.

"Of course we believe that the administering of compulsory exams in any form is repressive and elitist. Only a system of self assigned grades will ensure that all students will be treated fairly and equally."

Police officials were unwilling to comment at this time on whether the bomb threats and gas leaks were the work of one individual or some kind of organized group. They also declined to speculate whether there was any connection between these events and the bomb threats and fires at Pembina Hall earlier this year.

Board rejects UAB increase

The Board of Governors today announced that it has rejected the University Athletic Board's proposal to increase athletic fees by $8.

The $8 increase had been endorsed by a portion of the undergraduate student population in late March. At that time, with referendum polls situated only in the Physical Education Complex main office, under the supervision of department head Ed Zemrau and his assistant Chuck Moser, 1000 votes were registered in favour, with none against, the increase.

The Board of Governors' chairman, John Schlosser, stated that they had rejected the UAB's proposal because they felt the referendum results were not an accurate representation of the student body's stand on the matter.

"I'm not sure why, but we had this collective gut feeling that something dishonest was taking place during the referendum," said Schlosser.

The chairman claimed that the Board had no qualms about the way the pro-increase campaign was handled, stating that the outright threat by Zemrau to abandon the intramural program if the increase was not granted was "just plain politicking and was not to be disallowed."

As well, Schlosser did not think the fact that there was only one polling station on campus, and situated in a partisan area had anything to do with the B of G's rejection.

"I don't know why we feel the way we do," said Schlosser. "It's a mystifying decision, but we all realize that the powers that be work in mysterious ways. I'm sure that there is a justification for our decision right under our noses."

Zemrau was equally mystified. "I just don't understand it," he said. "I thought we conducted the campaign and voting in a thorough and honest way. Intercollegiate athletics are what makes this campus tick, and we intend to insure the present quality of the program is tripled next year, even if we have to fire all intramural administrators and sub-let their offices."

Savard is Dead

John Savard, long-time letter writer to the Getaway, was found dead in the Getaway offices Monday morning. Death appears to have resulted from acid burns to the esophagus. Empty bottles of developer for the Getaway's AM-745 phototypesetter were found nearby, and the Getaway's typesetter, Margriet Tilroe-West, has been taken into police custody.

Mrs. Tilroe-West, as she was being taken away, was heard by Getaway staffers to say: "Yes, I did it . . . and I'm proud of it! For six long years, I've been forced to set this man's inane and preposterous drivel into print! I couldn't take it anymore. I couldn't take his barging into Media Productions at all hours . . . his leering, laughing stare, because he knew, no matter what I thought of his stupid letters, I still had to slave over them. . ."

Mr. Savard is survived by his mother, Helen, and his computer (unnamed). The funeral will be held in several weeks, after it has been possible to clean out his office at the Nuclear Research Centre as a graduate student.

The Getaway plans to memorialize Mr. Savard by publishing a set of his complete works in 21 morocco-bound volumes.

The Killer

Controversy reigns as God is fired

God has been fired and will be leaving the University Parish in SUB at the end of this term.

The Ecumenical Chaplaincy Board (ECB), who fired their Anglican, Presbyterian, and United Church ministers in March, said, "We were wrong when we said the ministers were incompatible with each other. Actually God is the trouble maker in our office. The Holy Trinity just isn't acting as a team."

The letter informing God of his termination said, in part;

"The Board is concerned that students are not actively responding to your programs. In fact we haven't seen any for nearly two years."

"The weaknesses we observe in your present lordship are mainly ones of style."

However, an official of the ECB said that God had personal failings that made him ineffective in motivating student support. "God, who is supposed to be everywhere, is never around when you need him. His work is entirely done by a group of assistants working from a set of notes that are almost incomprehensible."

"Frankly, I don't think his advice is good enough or keeping up with the times. He gave that lilies of the field speech to one poor kid. It was 40° below out! Luckily he was arrested before he froze to death. And when a girl comes in and says she has VD, it doesn't do any good to tell her to 'turn the other cheek.'"

When asked to confirm rumors that "God loves everyone," the official said, "No one has ever accused our God of acting like some other gods, especially in Greece and India, however there is at least one documented indiscretion. An illegitimate child by a married woman. How can you expect students to worship someone like that?"

Fletcher Stewart, the Anglican minister fired by the ECB, spoke for God, who wished to deny charges that he was "authoritarian" and insisted that his word be taken as "gospel truth." God insisted that the University Parish structure was like a mountain that was impossible to move. "Hiring new people won't be the answer."

Still the ECB is preparing to hire a new God by September. They are looking for applicants with experience but they say personal integrity and leadership abilities are the most important qualities. "We want someone with strong convictions. He doesn't have to die for his beliefs certainly, but it would help."

God could not say what he would be doing in the future. He expects to be busy with off-campus interests but would like to return to the U of A in one form or another. "Perhaps a few visitations would show I can still command support."

It is expected that the Virgin Mary, God fieldworker, will be making appearances on campus this fall.

The Students' Union Theatre requires 8 active Students' Union members to serve on its Theatre Committee starting in the fall.

Membership is on a voluntary basis. The Committee will act in an advisory capacity to the Theatre Director in establishing general programming for the cinema and concert aspects of the operation. It will also recommend policies and overall direction to the Building Services Board.

We seek a cross-section of the student body from as many faculties as possible. The only qualifications for membership are an interest in the performing arts and a willingness to devote time and energy to ensure the proper functioning of the Committee.

For interviews, please contact the Theatre Office, 432-4764.

New party dominates

Those who follow student politics on this campus may have noticed a trend in the system of political parties.

The long-standing predominance of the Services Party is well-known. But for a few years it has been challenged with increasing regularity by the Acclamation Party. This year, the Acclamation Party fielded the winning candidates for all four UAB positions, and all six GFC positions for the Arts Faculty. These were only the more outstanding of its many victories.

In a Getaway interview, Randy Read explained the attraction to potential candidates of the Acclamation Party. "I have run six times on the Acclamation ticket, and it has never failed me." Remarkably, no candidate fielded by the Acclamation Party has ever lost.

But the most astute observers of the campus political scene say that a new challenger is on the horizon — the Vacancy Party. In a startling upset this year, it captured all twelve student seats on the Science Faculty Council, and five of the six Science GFC seats. Science had become a stronghold for the Acclamation Party, yet it won only the two Students Council seats and one position on GFC.

Superficial similarities would suggest that the Acclamation and Vacancy parties are the result of a schism in the Apathy Party — traditional rival to the Services Party. The Acclamation Party is, indeed, the successor to the Apathy Party, but the Vacancy Party appears to have arisen instead from a nostalgic wish to return to former years when students had no voice in university government. However, when questioned by the Getaway on this, a spokesperson for the Vacancy Party had absolutely nothing to say.

Fraser releases final VGW figures

Final attendance figures for Varsity Guest Weekend were announced by VGW coordinator Ian Fraser today. According to Fraser, 140,000 guests attended the University's open house in early March.

"I know my original estimates were considerably smaller," said Fraser, "but I forgot a zero when we were doing our final count. The figures were 140,000 all along."

The attendance figure makes this year's VGW the most successful ever, easily surpassing the next most successful VGW, in 1963, which was attended by 20,000 people.

Fraser says VGW officials used a complex and precise statistical means to determine attendance this year. The method involves an "informal head count" by VGW organizers, the volume of water used in each building divided by the number of students involved in student council, and other statistical data which Fraser said were confidential.

"I know that, to the untrained observer, there may not have appeared to be 140,000 guests on campus," said Fraser. "Many people are not taking into account the 8,000 who attended the hockey finals in the ice arena, or all the caretaking staff in each building." Fraser concluded his statements by saying, "Trust me."

Fenna sizzling again

"That's just prima facie bullshit, patently absurd, morally bankrupt bread and circuses for the plebians," said Alan Fenna at last night's council meeting after arriving late and interrupting a vote on the adoption of the minutes for the previous meeting.

Willie Gruber rushed to his old buddy's defence, saying, "I don't know what prima facie means, but I agree with Fenna!"

Fenna, obviously hurt by the remark, continued undaunted, decrying the vote as spurious and a "complete miscarriage of justice!"

At this point, observer Kaysi Eastlick cried out from the gallery, "You're impugning my motives."

Fenna, in his most debonair voice, saucily replied, "Tell that whore to shut up and sit down!"

In an interview after the meeting, ex-SU president Cheryl Hume said, "I don't know what could have happened to the dear boy. Maybe Stephen Kushner got at him!"

Big Al gives the high sign.

Qualified judges needed

New faculty coming

Minister of Advanced Education and Manpower James Horsman has announced the establishment of a new faculty at the University of Alberta.

Horsman claims that doctors, lawyers, politicians and judges are among the most important elements in any society.

"A community must generate talented and dedicated people to fill these essential positions," he said at a news conference yesterday.

"Presently the University of Alberta has faculties of law and medicine and a department of political science. However there is no mechanism to insure the development of competent judges," he added.

For years the proper method of selecting judges has been hotly debated in legal and political circles. Presently all judges are government appointees. It has been suggested that the selection could be made by groups of lawyers or even by the public via open elections.

Horsman believes he has discovered the ideal solution; the creation of a faculty of Judicial Science. Students will receive thorough training in all aspects of their future profession. Courses will include preliminary and advanced sentencing, as well as correct judgement. Bert Hohol, former minister of Advanced Education, has been hired to teach an optional course, An Introduction to Wisdom.

Only 50 students will be admitted to the prestigious new faculty. Due to the huge number of applications that are expected Progressive Conservative cabinet approval will be a requirement for acceptance.

So far at least three students, Len Thom, Bruce Webster and Joe McGhie, have already received approval and been accepted into the new faculty.

Real hot dope from the Pope

VATICAN CITY (CUP) - Pope John Paul II prayed for an end to racial hatred and advocated the inception of celibacy in mixed marriages yesterday.

The Polish-born pontiff claimed that although many of his close friends were "Dagos, I have no intention of marrying or reducing one of the Sisters."

As the result of his example several of the 13 onlookers in St. Peter's Square went directly home and expelled their mates from the house.

One man, R.C. Chapelli, told reporters later his wife, born in the south of Italy, had been difficult to deal with for a number of months. The fact that Chapelli's wife was nine months pregnant and that he also was a native of southern Italy, did not seem to bother him.

"My wife and I have a difference of opinion when it comes to racial matters," he said, "but we have always been tolerant of each other. My only complaint about my wife racially is that she believed in propagating the race while I did not. Don't get me wrong, I don't believe in birth control, just sex without babies."

Chapelli told reporters that he planned to take holy refuge in the mountains near Switzerland with the Sisters of Fulfillment Covenant (Physical branch).

Pam does about face

The Pamela Price "sex for grades" court case took a remarkable turn yesterday.

Price, a Dartmouth College co-ed, decided to drop the case after receiving a doctor's confirmation that she was indeed pregnant.

"I decided to give up this feminist's crap, and get married to my professor," she said. "What I really want is to settle down in the suburbs and have 2.2 kids. Marrying a professor is the best way I know of to reach this goal. Besides, it was probably him who knocked me up anyway."

Price also made one other precedent-setting demand.

"I asked for, and got, straight A's," she said.

"After all, I put out just as hard as anyone else, and I shouldn't be penalized simply because I enjoy my work."

The settlement has infuriated men's group across the country.

"We think this ruling is a step backwards," said Leroy "Killer" Svenson, a spokesman for the Men's League. "It means we'll all have to take courses from women, or turn into fags to get marks."

Olmstead still campaigning

They may have won the election, but the Olmstead slate are not about to stop their campaign.

Dean Olmstead, whose slate swept the student union executive elections, said, "We promised to keep in touch with the people when we got elected, and we've found that we met more people out campaigning than when we've been in our offices."

The first series of campaign materials will come out during exam week. The posters will say, "The Olmstead Slate: The winning team", and the pamphlets will have an updated platform.

The executive will be going through classrooms and cafeterias next year during the school week. Two nights a week they will go through floors of residence and meet students.

When asked if this would interfere with the business of running the students union, Olmstead said, "Sharon Bell will assume all the duties of the day-to-day operation of the students' union. Although this was her idea she was still willing to make the sacrifice and stay behind. We're all quite grateful."

New fee structure for Ontario

(CUP-OTTAWA) - Ontario Education Minister Bette Stevenson today announced a new differential fees structure for Ontario Universities. The new format, to be used in the 1979-80 term, involves a three-tiered structure.

"First, we want to discourage all jigaboos, kikes, gooks, rug riders and Albertans from attending our universities ... They contribute absolutely nothing, so they will pay the full costs of their education; about $5200," she said.

The second tier of the plan will see non-Ontario Canadians pay extra for their education in Ontario universities.

"We obviously have better schools in Ontario," said Stevenson.

These students would pay 60% of their education costs; about $2600.

THE 'GANG OF FOOLS'

Aside from the occasional squabble over who gets on top, you don't hear that much on campus about men's rights anymore.

Oh sure, there aren't that many women who go all the way on the first date, especially in the professional faculties and on the academic staff — but heck — that's getting better. You can't expect things to change overnight, after all.

Yes it's easy to forget about a lot of issues in the cosy confines of the 1970's campus. But if you stop to think, the extent of our apathy here at the U of A is alarming.

For example, a Getaway survey revealed the majority of male students (and some female students) still didn't think they were getting enough.

It's surprising indeed that a movement which has been around so long and which has been responsible for some very profound changes in our society, could have had such a small effect on the individual members of our university community. Or perhaps people here just don't remember what things used to be like.

And although the movement has made progress, we'll never be able to make more progress unless we're aware of the issues and have a familiarity with the areas that still have to be improved.

Women are still treating men as second-class citizens in many respects.

Despite legislation to the contrary, men are still being denied equal opportunities in employment and job training. After all, even at the University, the faculties of Home Economics and Dental Hygiene are 100% female-oriented. Men are also being denied, despite the means to control their own bodies, access to abortion and birth control pills. Despite the sexual revolution of the sixties, the double-standard still exists. Last week I sat all night in Darlings, as any true liberated male would, and I wasn't even approached once despite my 40 inch chest. But worst of all, despite the gains of the men's movement, men are still considered by most people to be only the equals of women.

Even on our campus, where intellectual pursuits should consider all aspects of life, there is a shocking and shameful lack of Men's Studies courses. If a man is to realize his true worth, he must have access to such enlightening courses as "Men in the Soviet Union."

As students, it is our responsibility to separate ourselves from the preconceptions society has instilled in us.

Men are superior to women and deserve better treatment. Especially here at the university (which was, after all, built by men), we should try to escape our individual concerns and consider this issue with the lack of sobriety it deserves. If we do, perhaps we will then be able to put women in their place.

STAFF LIST

Let's see . . . we need a lot of staff. About 15 good newswriters, the kind who type and don't make many spelling mistakes. And a few sports writers who can talk (preferably write) in polysyllables. I'd like a few reviewers who weren't so into art as "a personal experience between persons." Oh, and a bunch of photographers who can figure out a One-Step camera. And a bunch of cute girls or at least a few guys who would shave every day.

Shortly before his tragic death, John Savard submitted the above mysterious characters to the Getaway with the following explanation:

Several years ago, I saw an ad for Burroughs SELF-SCAN ® panels which claimed that one could represent just about any characters with a 5x7 dot matrix: the smallest size normally used with computers. I was inspired to look into the validity of this claim, and fiddled around with several sheets of graph paper.

What you see now is a second version of my enormous cast of characters; drawn on special graph paper created by a small FORTRAN program using the Electrostatic Printer-Plotter attached to the Amdahl. A Xerox copy of the output was used to draw the characters on by hand.

Included in the assemblage are characters for Korean, Hebrew, Arabic, Japanese (katakana), Greek, Georgian, Icelandic, Russian, and Armenian; chessmen, slot machine symbols, playing card symbols, astrological symbols; mathematical symbols, APL characters..

Kick me

On behalf of the Progressive Students Association, the Federation of Alberta Students, all minority groups, handicapped students and working people everywhere I resolutely condemn you for your prejudiced treatment of me and my allies all year long.

Time and again you guys have sucked up to Steve and Kaysi while irresponsibly attacking and slandering me. Not that I care about any damage you red-baiting may have done to my image. It's the students I'm concerned about.

You guys kissed Steve's ass all year long and don't think I didn't notice. Especially those fascist bastards Barrett and Blinston.

Chicks have rights

I am sick and tired of the needless abortion of chicken eggs. After all, a chicken egg has the right to become a chicken. Cases have been noted where chicken eggs have actually clucked before being thrown to a cruel fate of someone's breakfast. God made chicken eggs to be chickens. Let us not continue to upset the delicate balance of nature by continuing to eat eggs, fried, scrambled, or ANY style. Don't eat an egg tomorrow!

Damned good idea they had

So you've fired God. Well it's about time. That dude has burned me up for a long time. Not only is he ethically out to lunch but his personality is the pits. I disagree with the outdated code of conduct and sexual restrictions he puts forward but I really get annoyed with his ego tripping; as if he were any better than you and me.

Myself, I have always advocated the most liberal, free-thinking of positions. A person has the right to be as happy as possible. Whatever makes a person happy is fine by me. You make your own decisions and you live your own life. I think most students at this university would agree with these fundamental truths.

What I'm getting at is this: the University Parish needs a new leader and I think I'm the one. I expect really think a lot of students will be willing to follow me. Hell, I don't expect them to worship me. Mind you, I do have experience as an idol.

So what the heck; give me the job. Choose someone who's known for standing by his bargains. Perhaps a "devil may care" attitude is the one we all should take.

Summer Rerun

Hello again.

Well you probably know by now that left wing extremist elements prevented me from running in the student union elections this year.

No doubt you too are full of righteous indignation at the high handed way those anti-semites interfered again with my mission to lead my people, I mean my fellow students.

Well don't worry. I'll be back. I intend to take a couple of Home Ec. Courses next year and run for SU president.

Where did we go?

The late '70s have been marked by an incredible wave of conformity. The average young person today is intent solely on keeping his or her wardrobe in fashion so that he or she won't look out of date at the disco. People are so reluctant to live their own lives that thousands flock to join pseudo-religious cults so that they can replace their duty to think with the simple-minded doctrines of a half-crazed lunatic.

So what I want to know is what's happened to us, the Revolutionary Workers League? I mean we're everything people seem to want. We have all the answers to all problems and God knows they're easy enough to remember. We have plans for marches and support rallies that would give meaning to thousands of empty lives. But where are these people — we're waiting for them. Right now the RWL consists of two economics students, one drop out and a pile of books we've been trying to sell since 1976.

Maybe we need a new leader. Since Nick Cooke left, none of our leaders have had as much charisma as Ed Broadbent, let alone Jim Jones. Please somebody join us and get the RWL working.

Letters

Now I'm going to explain this one last time. THERE IS A 250 WORD LIMIT! If a letter is longer than that all sorts of terrible things happen. The managing editor gets upset and cries. This makes the arts editor sad and all the record reviews turn out weepy. This pisses off the sports editor and he beats his wife. This makes the editor furious and she demands we print another women's supplement. The news editor gets mad then and sulks. The associate takes an extra valium. All because YOUR LETTER WAS TOO LONG!

Demand abortion

I hate to add more fuel to the fire of the "abortion vs. creation" debate, but I do like to have the last word, and besides, no one seems to be interested in how I'm going to save the world (in 250 words or less) anymore.

It seems that there are dozens of soon-to-be-born-again Christians running around who are afraid they're going to end up aborted.

It must be realized that these beings cease to exist as people shortly after misconception. Sure, their hearts may beat, but can a being without a functioning brain really be a person?

Let's forget about abortion on demand for these "people"; let's make it compulsory.

When your presadent of BACUS people always think you a dolt. Now in my case this simply isn't true. Sure I was the only person in the BACUS elecshuns who drew an opponent, but I won didn't I. ## Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha, ha,

Well the year is over and we sure beat you guys.

OK, we lost the football game 39-0, but Cheryl was captain so it doesn't count.

Sure we slipped a bit near the end of the year but we were on top of things most of the time and you know it.

How about NUS huh? We sure showed that Jeff Parr guy. Let's face it, students love and support us and hate you guys. And there's nothing you can do about it. Ha, ha, ha.

You guys kissed Cheryl's ass all year long and attacked and slandered us and don't think we didn't notice it.

But we won. Ha, ha, ha.

Pro Sports Talk

Last night's Intramural Politics Awards banquet set me to thinking about the state of minor league politics at this campus. But first the results.

Not surprisingly, the most valuable player award went to Steve Kushner. Although Cheryl Hume fans rightly criticized him throughout the year for his lack of points in council, his leadership in February's playoffs guaranteed him his place as all-star right winger.

What was a surprise was Kaysi Eastlick carrying off the scoring crown. Besides her numerous assists with Kushner, Kaysi set up many goalgetters in the slot area.

The most gentlemanly player of course went to Dave Fisher. Although fellow players complained he was consistently hitting them below the belt (in the wallet area) he quietly and effectively controlled much of the play. He was also named all-star center.

Cheryl Hume did not go unrewarded for her efforts this year. Although she did not get a lot of goals, her defensive, hard hitting style scared a lot of teams into toughening up, which may have eventually been her downfall. A just choice for all-star left winger.

Thus does the year end. So what are we left with? Well, Cheryl Hume's record for shots in a single game in last December's Getaway, will probably stand for several years. Alan Fenna's seasonal and single council meeting penalty records may never be broken.

Other highlights of the season are soon to become memories. We may never see the stylish stickhandling of a Kaysi Eastlick again. We all grieved the early loss of David Rand, an all-star last year, who's suddenly decided to stop playing the game. Tricky center Harvey Groberman will not return next year, a loss to all fans of his clever but eccentric style.

The biggest loss will be that of veteran right winger Mike Ekelund. Never considered a star and never much of a team player, Mike shocked the league when he made the first team last spring. His bold courageous style even earned him a tryout with the big leagues. He fared poorly, however, and will be retiring after his sixth season.

Well, what about next year. I'm afraid that team captain Dean Olmstead will have a tough time capturing the scoring title as long as he stays on Sharon Bell's line. In all, it looks to be a less exciting year. The league will be dominated by smaller players, few of whom appear to be great shooters but all tenacious checkers. Alan Fenna seems sure to set record for most infractions in a career and may get another shot at first string.

But for the next few years things look pretty bleak. Farm teams are not generating the quality of players they used to. They are even having a hard time with getting enough young players. Unfortunately today's youth are abandoning the sport of politics for other games. Peter Pocklington, owner of the Edmonton Drillers Soccer team may be happy, but for politics fans at the U of A, it may be the end of an era.

Spring housecleaning

Hi, Dean Olmstead here. Your Students' Union president remember? You voted for me in February. The tall guy hanging around Sharon Bell. Yes, that's me.

Anyway, it looks like our executive is going to get off to a slow start this year. Sorry, but I think it's going to take us until the end of May just to clean out our offices. You wouldn't believe the mess last year's executives left. Sharon gave . . . er, I got Cheryl's office. I've spent the last week shovelling old NUS pamphlets into the garbage. Now I'm confronted with stacks of stuff like the Canadian Tribune, documents on the social class structure of the department of agriculture, and a bunch of pictures like I haven't seen since the last engineers "foreign film" festival.

When Sharon took Kaysi Eastlick's office we found some incredible stuff. We've got pictures of every political executive that Kaysi has gone out with down to Rickey Schwartz, first-grade president of Okotoks Elementary.

Chanchal doesn't know what to do with the 500 war games that Mike Ekelund left him. Tema is happy; Steve left her all his copies of Canadian Zionist and a dozen boxes of slides from his trip to Israel. Kyle is still pissed off; he knows that Fisher has at least $80,000 in the office but he can't find it.

So it's going to take a while to get going here but once we do, things look pretty good. Jocelyn the secretary has already shown me how to use the coffee maker and Sharon has promised to write something so I can speak in council next week. If she has time.

(ENTEBBE-CUP) Ugandan dictator Idi Amin announced plans to leave Uganda for a year of teaching abroad. The announcement was made at an impromptu news conference held from Amin's private helicopter above Entebbe yesterday.

Amin says he will begin teaching courses at the University of Alberta in September, 1979. "People think I am leaving Uganda because of political pressure", Amini is reported as saying, "but the U of A made me an offer I couldn't refuse."

Amin will teach three courses yet-to-be named in the University's department of educational psychology.

The chairman of the department of Ed. Psych., Dr. Harvey Zwingli, said General Amin is expected to fit well in the department. "He will be teaching at least two courses in tandem with Dr. A.E. Hohol", said Zwingli.

Amin confirmed he was looking forward to teaching at the U of A. "I have a message for those students", he said. "With my experience in national diplomacy and my international reputation as a tactician, I have something to tell the students in... ah, educational psychopathy."

"I am also interested in getting into that new field called Touchie Feelie," he added. "Mr. and Mrs. Kozey will be working on that one with some of the nubile teaching assistants."

Amin's explanation of the content of these courses was cut short when the transmission from his helicopter ceased abruptly.

What about transfers?

Do you know that courses completed at one institution may be transferred for credit at another?

It makes sense.

So does the Alberta Provincial Transfer Guide published annually by the Alberta Council on Admissions and Transfer. The Guide lists all course equivalents among post-secondary institutions in Alberta.

No matter what direction you plan to transfer, whether to a college, university, institute of technology or other post-secondary institution, the Guide will let you know where you stand.

The next edition will be out in July. You can get it free from your Registrar or from

FEWER MEN POORER MARKS

"Many women do not recognise themselves as being discriminated against, Wonderful, ain't it."

Hugh M. Hefner

"Most men do not recognize themselves as discriminated against; no better proof could be found of their total conditioning."

Karl Millet

The level of male enrollment at the U of A, as well as the proportion of male students to female students has dropped considerably over the past academic year.

According to some professors, this is a result of a higher dropout rate among male students. "Males find it is more difficult for them to please their professors than it is for females", said one professor, who asked not to be identified. "With so many male professors around, it's not surprising that females should be given some sort of a break."

Craig Carmichael, a professor in the Political Science department was more open: "I've noticed both a qualitative and quantitative difference in the work of female and male students. While the written work is comparable, women tend to take on more 'extracurricular' work. I find their oral work far more stimulating than anything I've ever gotten from a male."

Teaching Assistant Thomas Barrett was quick to point out that the differences in grades between the sexes (women average a full 0.2 grades higher than men in first year) is a result of the different sorts of work they perform; "I've seen papers that males have worked on for an entire term that earned poorer marks than females have been able to get in a single night."

Fourth year Psych student Carole Duvalle confirmed that it is not hard for a female student to 'make the grade', especially when professors mark "on the curve". "In my experience, its true that a reasonable able woman, who is willing to do the necessary work, has little trouble doing well in courses. In fact, with the exception of a bit of cramming, I've never been really challenged by a course."

The trend of higher marks for females is fairly pronounced across campus, although there is some deviation among the different departments. The degree to which females are favoured ranges from very high, in Engineering (where female students average 9.0, with the exception of Ethel 'Butch' Bolt, who got only 8.9) to very low, in Greek studies, where there appears to be no greater preference for either sex.

Prominent Greek Studies professor Archimedes Onassis explained, "Its no wonder that students don't do that well in Greek; to me, they're all just a bunch of asses."

Tough period for Donlevy

The U of A's Phys. Ed. department has made public a startling new discovery concerning male performance in the field of sports.

Dr. A Quack, a visiting researcher working closely with our own Jim Donlevy has undertaken an intensive study of the little known "male curse", a physical phenomenon analogous to the female menstruation period. The scientific world has long recognized that the notorious "time of the month" renders women unfit for political office, the military, and high stakes poker. Quack's new evidence now suggests that certain male activities may also be impaired by the male curse. Symptoms of the curse include heightened emotional sensitivity, fluid retention, nosebleeds, hot and cold flashes and a tendency to drop key passes. Quack and Donlevy have explored the correlation between the occurrence of the curse and the performance of athletes in various intercollegiate sports. The results were remarkable, and Donlevy feels that the curse was a significant factor in the football bear's crucial losses.

"Everybody has been saying that our boys were a bunch of choke artists, that the team uniform collars were three sizes too small, that they just laid down and died for the big games. Now I have the satisfaction of knowing it wasn't true. It so happens that three quarters of our first stringers had their monthlies on the day of the UBC game. One of the side effects is enlarging of the mammaries, can you imagine trying to throw a decent block with swollen and sensitive nipples?"

The curse also explained

some player's adverse reaction to press coverage and questionable behavior on the road. One of the bear's linemen, Tim Bole, was willing to talk about the problem.

"I'm just not myself when it's that time of the month," said Bole. "I get bitchy and irritable, and I cry at the drop of a hat. When I saw the stuff the papers wrote about us I lay awake all night weeping and feeling sorry for myself. It was like I was going to explode from all the mixed-up emotions boiling inside. If only I could have smashed up a hotel room or two or pissed in an elevator to release my frustrations."

Now that the cause of the Golden Bears losses has been pinpointed its hoped that a similar problem will not occur next year. Along with the tape and linament the Bears' trainer fully intends to take a man-sized supply of Midol along for those critical end-of-season blues.

What a reception! Gary's gay with Midol.

"Man is defined as a human being and woman is defined as a female in Webster's Dictionary of 1848. They sure don't write dictionaries like they used to."

Male writers are penetrating

With the world of big time Canadian literature almost completely dominated by women, it's encouraging to know that men are creating a foothold in the empire of Atwoods and Laurences. The Getaway's Helen Gurley, arranged an interview with Melvin Aesthete, the leader of a group of young male writers who are beginning to write about our country from a male point of view.

Getaway: A lot of people might think that we have enough male writers as it is. Could you shed some light on this issue?

Aesthete: These are the same people who think George Eliot was a man. Does anybody seriously think W.O. Mitchell is a man? He's obviously a woman.

and an old one at that. These so called male writers are just women who have taken on male pen names to cash in on men's liberation. The people who control things from behind the scenes are still women; you don't even get published in the little magazines in this country if you're not female. It's a closed club.

Getaway: What issues do you see as being distinctively male — what is unique about the male perspective?

Aesthete: A male is in tune with the natural world. All that time spent hunting deer and wild fowl lets him flow with rhythms that are organic and real. The man doesn't fortify himself in some sterile kitchen with a micro-wave oven and the latest selection of electronic wonders. He gets close to the earth, he develops an intuition about things.

Getaway: You really believe there is such a thing as men's intuition then?

Aesthete: Sure there is. There's nothing mysterious about it though; it's just another name for a power that people have when they let themselves be open to experience and discard a lot of the old categories. The male knows when he's going to draw that winning poker hand or when his long shot is going to come in at the track, he doesn't have to calculate, like a woman drawing up a shopping list or calculating the amount of her alimony payment.

Getaway: You are currently working on a new novel about men's consciousness. Could you tell me something about it?

Aesthete: Certainly. It's about a male who tries to break into professional nursing and his struggles to gain the acceptance of the females who control the hospital scene. The hero's a lonely sensitive man, and he has to cope with a bunch of insensitive, callous types who won't admit he's good for anything other than a good roll in the hay.

Getaway: Have you got anything else you're working on for future publication?

Aesthete: Certainly. I'm thinking of doing a novel on how it feels to be a wounded war veteran who hangs around with bull fighters, and another about a man who goes to sea with a bunch of other men to hunt down a big white whale. I think it's important for the reading public to get to understand the sorts of challenges and pressures a man has to endure. We've always been cast in the role of victims, you know.

Getaway: Have men always been shut out of the writing scene, or have they just been ignored by female historians who write history solely from a female point of view?

Aesthete: There are a lot of male writers who have been ignored. Did you know that Shakespeare was a man, and Dostoevsky, and Homer, Goethe, Chaucer, Tolstoi, Dante and Ovid.

Getaway: Homer? Didn't he live around the same time as Sappho?

Aesthete: You can sneer if you want, Helen, but we've come a long way already.

Get thee to a nunnery Maggie

Beyond Reason: Part VI (A Getaway Exclusive!)

The last thing I remembered about Pierre was his cute little dimples. With their memory still pulsating in my fevered brain, I encountered a man who would change my life — again. I was in Studio 54 watching Truman watch Bianca watch Halston watch Warhol watch me, but for some strange reason I was dissatisfied. I had just dumped my date Bruce Nevins (he's a Perrier water exec, dontcha know), and was trying to bum a joint from somebody when, suddenly, I saw — HIM. He's a Catholic priest, a fine Southern gentleman, but his name is of no importance.

"Hello," he murmured softly.

"Hello yourself," I sighed sweetly. I was bored.

But, after him, no more. I had a mission in life. It was with a great sense of anticipation that I entered the "Our Lady of Lost Causes" convent the next day.

My days as a nun were very enlightening: they were a deep and meaningful experience, a source of strength and inspiration, a beacon of spiritual guidance, an excuse to kill a month or two of my screwed-up life. Besides, I hadn't tried religion yet, and my agent told me it was becoming fashionable again.

The Mother Superior at my convent was a real nice broad, and incidentally an old friend of mine from my footloose and fancy free days at Marrakesh. She's gone straight now, though, and she made a promise to renounce the devil and all his works and devote my life to goodness and truth. I hadn't promised that much to anyone since my courtship with Pierre; luckily, I still had his list with me (ohmigod! no pot?!). I only snickered once as I read it to the mother superior, and she fell for it. HOLY SHIT, I was a nun!

To be honest, I must admit that my pregnancy caught the entire convent off guard. Christ, you'd think they'd never seen a knocked-up nun before! They were probably most surprised by the fact that I had gone after such an old priest, but I guess they never met Pierre.

My Mother Superior was extremely upset at the incident, but I knew how to handle her. Consulting my ACTRA handbook, I decided on my "I didn't mean it, Mommy" act; she crumbled and promised me another chance.

Meanwhile, hordes of reporters had descended on the convent, wanting to know if this meant a reconciliation with Pierre. While flirting with the reporters and posing for 23 pictures in my brand new outfit (designed by Halston, no less), I told them (in seven separate interviews) that I had no comment, but I'd sing them a song if they asked nicely.

Well, shit, this lifestyle was kind of fun! There were only two things I disliked: the hassles from photographers when I went to pick up my royalty cheques, and the looks the other nuns gave me when I showed up for evening prayers in Mercedes. Other than that, this "H Maggie" crap suited me fine.

It was in my sixth month that I began to be plagued by doubts. Here I was, thirty years old, an ex-flower child, ex-Prime Minister's wife, ex-jetsetter, ex-actor, expectant mother... what the hell was I doing in a convent? I needed to be me, to be FREE, to soar like a bird, to smoke a joint, to do a little dance, make a little love, get down tonight!

But I couldn't do it. I couldn't let them. There was simply no way! The beautiful people had transformed me into a pretty (like my Dad always says, "may not be very bright, but she's sure got a nice ass!"), mixed-up disco queen into a pretty, mixed-up nun.

So I left.

It was time for the next chapter.

Another male exploited

You're 19 years old and in the final stages of a pre-law program. You've busted your ass to try and make it to the top but the competition is pretty stiff and every sta nine is crucial.

Ever since you were a kid you've dreamed of being a lawyer; hobnobbing with politicians and playing golf with doctors; making the big money. Other kids idolized Gordie Howe or Pierre Trudeau. You always looked up to Alan Eagleson.

People always told you how good looking you were but you never took them seriously. Until that day your English Prof, Mrs. Bogle, called you into her office for some extra counselling.

You were pleased when she sat you down and told you how interested she was in your work. But your joy turned to shock when she locked the door, turned off the light and let you in on the facts of university life. Put out or flunk out.

What would you do? Compromise your principles or endanger your future?

Every year scores of male students on campus are faced with similar problems. You see this as a real story. Three short years ago Bruce X was in this predicament. Today Bruce X is close to a Law Degree. He did what he felt he had to do to get ahead.

In order to prevent other males from being exploited an organization has been formed to stop sexual harrasment. For more information see the Law School bulletin board or phone 433-4033 and ask for the full details.

Langevin becoming a goalie

The Oilers are really getting desperate.

Desperate to hold on to as many of their current players as possible when they move into the NHL next year.

As a result Oiler owner Peter Pocklington has made an agreement with Winnipeg Jet officials to present fans with something unique on Wednesday evening in the last game of the season.

Dave Langevin, normally a defenseman, will be in goal for the Oilers, with forward Morris "The Cat" Lukowich in the nets for Winnipeg.

According to the agreement signed with the NHL, the Oilers can protect two goalies and skaters. However, the team would much rather protect third skater than Oiler back-golier Ed Mio.

Pocklington apparently hopes that Langevin's appearance on Wednesday will make him legally eligible to be claimed as a goaltender.

"No one has ever legally established what qualifies a person as either a skater or a goaltender," said Pocklington Monday night.

"We figure if a guy has played both positions he can claim either way. Who knows? Maybe Langevin has a future as a goalie" he added.

Oiler coach Glen Sather revealed that the plan to put Langevin in goal had been on the burner for some time.

"We've had Langevin working out with Dryden for a couple of weeks now," he said.

"We didn't decide to go through with it until Winnipeg clinched third place on Sunday night," Sather added. "Now it doesn't matter. This last game was meaningless anyway. Who knows? With Lukowich in goal maybe Gretzky can still win the scoring title."

WHA president Howard Baldwin has refused to intervene.

"Langevin and Lukowich are both under contract, and they're willing to play goal where the hell do I care", Baldwin said.

"Personally I think it's a hell of an idea. We may try it in the playoffs if we get way behind in the game. I wonder if Mike Rogers would make a good goalie."

Bill Torrey, general manager of the New York Islanders (the team that owns Langevin's rights) had a different attitude.

"This is the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard of," said Torrey. "I refuse to believe Peter Pocklington would stoop to such a stunt," he added. "I assure you he'll hear from our lawyers if he does," Torrey concluded.

A SRO crowd is expected to witness this totally unprecedented event on Wednesday evening.

Before and after.

Bhattacharya turning white

Students' Union VP academic Ralph Smith announced today that he is giving up his alias, Chanchal Bhattacharya, and returning to sanity. "I'm wiping off the shoe polish and picking up my old membership in the Derrick Club," beamed the newly lily-white Smith.

When asked why he had been using the name Chanchal Bhattacharya since Grade 12, Smith said it was really a ploy to get him elected VP Academic. "The entire U of A is a bunch of left-wing Commies," replied Smith. "Hell, I realized early on that a White, Anglo-Saxon Protestant who is farther to the right than John Savard and Len Thom put together would go nowhere in Student Politics. I had to darken up my image."

Smith changed his name, colored his skin with shoe polish, began speaking in long winded left wing dialectic and eating mass quantities of spicy foods. Figuring that the left-wing bleeding hearts would take pity on him, he set out on his mission of political conquest.

His plan succeeded wildly, and he became campus liberalism's favourite token son. Adopted by the token-hungry Olmstead Slate, Smith saw his plan blossom into success.

When we asked Ralph Smith why he chose the name Chanchal Bhattacharya, he replied "Bhattacharya means 'fuck sheep in the dark' in Bengali."

Lennon caught trying to Getaway with murder

Outgoing Students' Union President Cherly Spume has announced that she is bringing a lawsuit against the student newspaper, the Getaway, and its editor Siren Lennon.

According to Ms. Spume, there has been "mismanagement and fraudulent use of the Getaway's funds by Lennon." She said she wants to "get the sucker thrown in the netherworld and recover the dough." The alleged wrongdoings are according to Spume, perpetrated by Lennon, siphoning off monies from the Getaway's $2.4 million budget to invest in outside business interests for her personal gain. Companies mentioned by Spume as being involved were Getaway Aviation Ltd. and Getaway Holdings Ltd. which Lennon and operates both the Getaway Hotel and the Getaway Hotel in Edmonton.

When asked how she first became suspicious of illegalities involving students' union money, Spume replied, "My first clue was the absence of Bub Slug on the comic (editorial) page. Siren allocated the funds to pay a writer and artist their $100,000 fee and when the feature was continually missing I began to wonder where the money was going. Clue number two was the resignation of Roney J. Bliggins, copy editor. I told Siren that a reliable staff member like Roney was to be retained at any cost and to secure the funds from miscellaneous expenditures of her budget. So when Roney said he had quit for a better paying job frankly I was puzzled and suspicious. The answer came when Stevie (council member Steven Pushingher) and I were cruising down Boyle St. in our university staff car and decided to pop into one of the local establishments. The place happened to be called the New Getaway Hotel. As Stevie was digging for a fin I noticed, right under the $5 for two hours sign, a small notice stating the hotel was under new management. It was signed by Siren Lennon! On our subsequent return to headquarters I sent Stevie and the rest of my undercover agents to work investigating Lennon's financial history. They discovered numerous unaccounted transactions between Lennon and the aforementioned companies involving large sums of money. I therefore have no doubt she was absconding Getaway funds because she couldn't have saved anything on the wretched salary we pay her now."

The suit against Lennon is the second in two years against Getaway editors. Last year's editor Don Inkphingers settled out of court with the former Student Union general manager Harry Goldfingers.

Lennon was unavailable for comment because of an emergency trip to Venezuela to visit her sick grandmother. She left last Friday on her Getaway Aviation chartered jet.

Interim editor in Lennon's absence will be Jock Stewart. Stewart, the present sports editor, said he will try to improve the present quality of the paper by tripling the size of the sports section and running the arts section on page thirteen (column six).

Clark screeching again

Booze in the news

NEWFOUNDLAND (CUP) - Tory leader Joe Clark today criticized the federal government ruling party Liberals for failing to recognize the importance of screech sales to this province's economy.

Clark cited several examples of the benefits of the Newfie bootleg beverage, noting that former Premier Joey Smallwood, often praised as the only living cretin of confederation, was able to rule for several decades under the influence.

In kicking off his election campaign, Clark also renewed his pledge to emancipate the downtrodden men of the nation. In his statement the Tory leader mentioned that he believed comprehensive legislation could be drawn up to "free the men of Canada. I mean, if I want to be known as Joe Who-McTeer, nobody should be able to stop me."

Nationalization of natural assets was an extreme threat, something to be feared, he said.

In closing Clark mentioned that he would receive a warm reception from Alberta voters when he travelled to his home province later this month. "Alberta voters, bless their pointed little heads, always vote conservative. Despite my stand on natural resources, they'll opt for the Tories. All that crap Loughheed has been saying about spreading the wealth around for the benefit of all Canadians really doesn't appeal to the average Albertan, they are very concerned with their fellow countrymen. I think I speak for the majority of Albertans when I say that," he stated.

Sharon answers the Bell

In a surprise announcement today, SU vp internal Sharon Bell announced her candidacy in the May 22 federal election. She will be seeking victory as the Progressive Conservative candidate in the Strathcona constituency.

Miss Bell says this latest move is a "natural culmination" of three years' planning.

"It's been so much fun running in different contests, and everyone has been so nice to me, that the prospect of a federal victory is really thrilling!" commented Miss Bell in a Getaway interview yesterday. She also expressed pleasure at the opportunity of working with Tory leader Joe Clark.

"I styled my SU executive campaign after Clark's election strategy, and I hope to repay Mr. Clark by serving him in the federal election," she said.

When asked if running in the election will conflict with her duties as vp Internal, Miss Bell quickly answered in the negative.

"There's really not much involved in my job with the SU," she said, "and people will probably not even notice I'm gone."

SU President Dean Olmstead said yesterday in a phone interview that he is "tickled pink" with Sharon's decision.

"There's not a doubt in my mind that Sharry, ...er, Miss Bell has an enormous amount of talent and drive to offer this nation," said Olmstead. "She's proven herself worthy time and time again, and her addition to the Clark team can only be seen as a big bonus," Olmstead added.

Olmstead declined to comment on what would happen if Miss Bell wins the election, merely stating that "a wait-and-see policy seems most appropriate at this point in time."

FEDERAL ELECTION UPDATE

Maggie exploited again

CALGARY (CUP) - Prime Minister Trudeau opened the western leg of his cross-country campaign tour today stating that he plans to exploit his wife and children as much as possible as electioneering tools.

"Let's face it," he said "my kids are cute and my wife has got a nice ass (just ask her). Assets like that have to be employed. I don't plan to win or lose the May 22 election on government policies, that's not the kind of thing the voting public is interested in."

Trudeau told reporters that his wife's soon-to-be-released autobiography will aid his quest for re-election. "Beyond Reason (now being serialized in several newspapers across the country) will draw a lot of male supporters to the Liberal party. In the past my appeal has been strong with women but slightly weaker with men. Margaret is going to be taking time out from her busy schedule on the scandal tour to travel with me. We'll be riding in separate train cars so that she will be able to entertain male supporters at her leisure."

Trudeau also claimed that he would be enticing men to vote Liberal by promising them each a chapter in Maggie's next book, Beyond Hope.

Broadbent woos labour vote

TORONTO (CUP) - New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent launched his 1979 election campaign yesterday promising that his party would live or die with the Canadian Labour Congress.

At a news conference last evening Broadbent claimed that the CLC was an accurate body, a true image of voter preference. "The CLC executive understands the labour union member, his wants and needs. We'll throw our lot in with them. I think that all the CLC exec has to do is suggest to their members that the NDP is the party and that's the way they'll vote. The Teamsters in USA set precedence for such group movement; what Jimmy Hoffa said, went, until he went."

Broadbent claimed that Prime Minister Trudeau was wrong if he believed that inflation could be stopped by curtailing rising wage and price indexes.

"It's obvious that the answers to Canada's economic problems lay in the labour movement. The CLC has assured me that if prices continue to rise, they will simply demand higher wages. It seems like a simple answer to me. I don't know why nobody thought of it before."

Broadbent has also pledged support for the working women, stating that he felt females deserved equal pay and job security.

"The NDP party line on this matter is straight forward: every man that works in the home will receive the same pay that female home makers do."

"As well," he said, "we will make divorce illegal, thus insuring female domestic engineers will have a measure of job security."

In closing Broadbent praised the CLC for their financial support of the NDP, saying that although the money is rumoured to have originally gone to a labour pension plan he had no qualms about accepting it.

"The CLC executive and membership believe that the NDP is more crucial to their future than old age pension. After all, the $95 a month the federal government currently provides seems sufficient; a decrepid 80 year old's needs are pretty limited you know."

Albums of the Decade: a Gateway series

BENO JOHN (1961 - 1979)

Former Gateway staffer Beno John was found dead yesterday morning. His limp body was discovered in the Humanities Building. An autopsy has revealed that John was the victim of an overdose of Byron and Shelley.

This is the last in a series examining the top contemporary albums of the Seventies. Getaway rock critics and local experts are contributing their assessments, and readers are invited to discuss our top ten lists among themselves.

This issue: former Gateway editor Loreen Lennon, who we found staggering around outside of Pembina Hall.

1. Grand Funk E Pluribus Funk 1972 Perhaps more than any other group, Grand Funk reflected the mood and the feelings of the time they were active in. Though All the Girls of the World Beware! was also an excellent album for the power trio, only E Pluribus Funk captured the passion of Mark Farner's guitar and married it to Don Brewer's double-time percussion. And of course, the affair was consummated through the driving and melodic bass work of Don Schacht.

2. Conway Twitty The High Priest of Country Music 1974 Much-maligned by many people, country and western music is the only contemporary musical genre that speaks for the working class. Though in his decadent, nouveau riche lifestyle Twitty might not appear working-class, there is little doubt that the songs other people write for him reveal and discuss his humble roots. Twitty's best album, and therefore a modern classic.

3. Atomic Rooster Death Walks Behind You 1973 Former Arthur Brown sideman Vincent Crane formed this trio and combined important lyricism with zest and original compositions. Though this band only recorded two albums before being split up by artistic differences, they proved that Dan Hill doesn't have a monopoly on profundity.

4. London Symphony Orchestra Tommy 1970 The LSO has often been criticized for remaining aloof from mainstream contemporary music, but the stirring interpretation of The Who's Tommy was a successful merger between rock and classical motifs. Those who haven't heard the album can well imagine how beautifully stirring "Pinball Wizard" is when it is performed with an entire string section.

5. Carole King Tapestry 1970 A beautiful, sad, lovely, hopeful album. A touching and very feminine look at some decidedly masculine topics like rifles, earthquakes and travelling. A must for any modern woman's collection. Oh! just thinking about it makes me want to run home and play it! Carole has unfortunately never topped this dizzy height of musical accomplishment, though she has tried with each successive album, for they all sound exactly alike.

6. Billy Joel The Stranger 1978 I understand a lot of English students are studying the lyrics to this album both in class and at their study carrels. That's no surprise, because Joel is certainly the most important of the decade's singer-songwriters. Though this fact was known even as far back as "Piano Man", it is The Stranger that firmly asserts the artist's musical vision. I understand the English Department is considering creating a half-year course devoted to the intense study of Joel's complete works. All I can say is it's about time!

7. Neil Diamond Taproot Manuscript 1971 Neil Diamond can never be accused of being a mere hack, cashing in on every current trend, because Taproot Manuscript is a timeless work, capturing the true spirit of the black African and bringing it to the USA, where he displayed it in its true crudity. Though some have said this album is grossly overproduced, it cannot be forgotten that Diamond was exploring musical roots, and taking a step towards bringing a cultural heritage to modern music.

8. Heart Dreamboat Annie 1977 Canadians can be proud that it was in our country that this band established itself. Even though they treat their breeding ground of Vancouver like the plague, and have equated Canada with Uganda in terms of desirable places to be, this must not be attributed to their stunning commercial success. Annie and Nancy are not mere competent modern musicians; they know how to squeeze a dollar until Liz II is positively grinning.

9. Three Dog Night It Ain't Easy 1970 It's hard to believe that this album was recorded in the 70s, isn't it? (Some find it difficult to believe it was recorded at all.) Ignoring the fact that this group stole all of their songs, stole the title to this album, stole their arrangements and harmonies, and stole their stage style, they still rank as the most original of the early 70s singles bands.

10. Privilege Cantata Canada 1972 The best band Edmonton has ever produced. I'll never forget Mel Degan as he sang every part in the group's production of Jesus Christ Superstar, or how Cantata Canada made me proud to be an Edmontonian. A stunning examination of a nation's roots, and a startling revelation of a rock group's love for that nation.

Audience will die laughing

By Keith Asskiss

The genius of Peter Coe has produced another smash hit musical which is certain to skyrocket straight to Broadway.

Coe's flawless direction, combined with flawless performances by veterans Ron Moody and Glynis Johns has produced the most exhilarating and uplifting musical comedy ever to grace the Citadel stage.

Certain local critics scoffed five weeks ago when it was announced that Coe would be directing Saigon Shuffle, a musical version of The Deerhunter. But the ten minute standing ovation by yesterday's opening night Citadel audience testifies that the maestro has not lost his touch.

By downplaying the intensity and social commentary which Edmonton movie fans and Journal critic John Dodd found disturbing, Coe has once again succeeded in making top flight theatre accessible to Edmonton audiences and Journal reviewers.

Coe succeeded in unearthing the latent comedy in the Deerhunter and turned that pretentious drama into a rousing knee slapper of a musical comedy.

Credit must also go to Ron Moody, Glynis Johns and John Juliani, whose sterling performance thrilled and entertained Citadel patrons again.

Moody is sensational in the role of Michael, the deer loving steelworker whose latent passion for dancing is uncovered in a Viet Cong POW camp.

Only an actor with Moody's experience and sensitivity could make this difficult transition believable.

Coe's decision to turn the central Russian roulette scene into a lengthy and elaborate song and dance number was quite simply a stroke of genius. The thousands of yellow and pink balloons which were released from the ceiling at the conclusion of this number added an imaginative and original touch typical of Coe's directorial wizardry.

There was some apprehension before opening night that Miss Johns could not adequately and believably fulfill the role of Linda, the twenty-year old girl whom Michael eventually wins. However those of us who have followed Miss Johns' sterling stage and screen career never doubted her ability to bring the character of the tall blonde grocery clerk to life.

Never have Edmonton theatre goers been treated to more sophisticated and professional entertainment. If you were impressed by the lively sentimentality of Coe's Harold and Maude or his intelligent staging of Richard III then don't miss the rich entertainment of Saigon Shuffle.

I feel a special warmth for this delightful mixture of mirth and merriment because it is the last play I shall ever review.

Yes theatre fans from now on former columnist Frank Hutton will review stage events in our wonderful city. I have embarked on a new career as a public relations executive working for Citadel director Peter Coe, a man I have long admired and praised.

So thank you for being a wonderful and sophisticated audience who were perceptive enough to accept my judgement rather than bothering to exercise any you might possess.

Toodeloo dearies.

Dumbocki looks at hits for the 80s

By Nick Dumbocki

Our story begins in a dusty corner of The Getaway offices, a place that my Arts editor calls 'home'. Recovering from a bout with a particularly vicious bottle of Cutty Sark, his breath bathed me in noxious fumes as he proceeded to shred my Donna Summer record review.

"Relevance to the masses is what you want," he said, "You have . . . gurggh, aachh, bleecch!"

"I see," I lied.

Head in garbage can, (the kind intended solely for recyclable waste), my editor pointed to a stack of albums on his desk. "Review 'em," he said, "and do a good job. Or you'll be covering student council meetings for the rest of your . . . guuuhh . . . life."

I involuntarily shuddered at the thought of that despicable punishment, grabbed the albums, and headed out the door before my editor could ask me to join him in one more chorus of "Long Way to Tipperary".

It wasn't until I reached my comfortable penthouse suite in The Commercial Hotel that I realized the nature of my extraordinary find. Instead of the usual Buddy Holly meets the Crickets, Billy Vaughn and the Rodents crap we've been getting — the packages contained some of the hottest pressings I have ever layed eyes on.

Friends. These albums are so new, why . . . St. John's Edmonton Report hasn't even seen them yet! And they weren't even mentioned in the copy of Rolling Stone that I stole from HUB news. So let's give credit where credit is due. Those boys in the Canada Post Office busted their asses to get these albums to me in time . . . to outscop a nation! So without further adieu, I will begin my critique:

The Beatles — Magical Mystery Tour — I'm going to step out on a limb and say that this band may go places. The album concept itself is hokey, but talent is evident. Rhythms and vocals are nice, though it's easy to see that the Beatles have borrowed heavily from several ELO albums. I think if they tried a little harder, they could come up with something original. Their lyrics are OK anyways, except for on "Penny Lane" and "All You Need is Love". They have a lilting quality to them that makes 'em totally unsuitable for airplay on the quality rock stations like CHED. It's a good debut album; they rate a 9.

Jimi Hendrix Experience — Are You Experienced? — A trio that features a token black vocalist/lead guitarist. They dress flamboyantly; in the latest fashions from New York City. It's their hard driving, disco beat that I really like though. When I'm out on the floor, I need a steady rhythm — no fooling around, just good music. Jimi plays good music, and you don't have to be a John Travolta to keep up either; he just plays slow and easy. Put on your three piecer and your best coke spoon when you listen to this. 10 out of 10.

The Doors — Morrison Hotel — I never heard of these boys before, but believe me, they are no Fleetwood Mac. I would say that they are an excellent bar band (that was lucky to land a recording contract), but can never amount to anything higher than a warm-up group in the Kinsmen Field House. Add a synthesizer, some female vocalists, and a full symphony orchestra — then we'll have a good rock album. And they'll have to change their name. The Doors; how ignorant. A 4 on the scale.

There were others, but that's good enough for this issue. Make sure you go out to the record store right away and start asking for these.

Better yet. But two. One for you, and one for your grandmother. (Let's see. How many grams of coke did Warner Brothers promise?)
